A systematic scoping review of change management practices used for telemedicine service implementations.
[Our findings suggest that the slow rate of adoption of telemedicine may be due to a piecemeal approach to the change process, and a lack of understanding of how to plan, manage and reinforce change when implementing telemedicine services.]

Safety huddle in a community nursing setting.
Gray T. British Journal of Community Nursing 2020;25(9):446-450.
[Key Points: District nursing caseloads are rising at a remarkable pace, with approximately 4000 nurses caring for almost 55 million people; Safety huddles are daily meetings attended by members of the multidisciplinary team in community settings, which were designed to focus on certain patient groups; These meetings aim to prevent patient harm and promote patient and staff safety; Promotion of digital technology is needed to enhance nursing practice.]

Planned care rapid evidence review: Transforming outpatients
[This review is part 3 of a 3-part series exploring the evidence base of interventions to improve planned care. This pack is presented as a directory of interventions, covering eight main interventions for transforming outpatient appointments, including: One-stop clinics; community-based clinics; alternatives to consultant-led care; virtual consultations; and, virtual follow-up clinics.]

AHSN Network Digital & AI Reset report; lessons and legacy from the COVID-19 pandemic in health and care.
[The findings underline the importance of a robust data infrastructure, data operability and common standards to facilitate data sharing within national policy and governance frameworks. This will help to empower people, communities and NHS and social care staff to serve local needs, thereby minimising health inequalities and rebuilding communities in line with the ‘levelling up’ agenda in a decentralised, distributed health resilience model.]

Case studies from the PCN Network and the Community Network: achieving integration across primary and community care.
NHS Confederation; 2020.
[This report, part of the NHS Reset campaign, follows a November 2019 roundtable held by the NHS Confederation and the Independent Commission on the College of the Future. It focused on the relationship between colleges and the NHS through the lens of integrated care systems. By better embedding colleges into core NHS workforce development, and better using their local recruitment and training power, we can help to ensure a sustainable, agile and innovative future health and care workforce.]

Fixing social care: Better quality services and jobs.
Trades Union Congress (TUC); 2020.
https://www.tuc.org.uk/research-analysis/reports/fixing-social-care
[This report argues that the Covid-19 pandemic has shown how essential social care is to society. It looks to the future and building a better system, including a demand for long-term, sustainable funding of services that provide value for money to the public purse while meeting the needs of individuals and communities. It also calls for appreciation of care workers through improved pay and working conditions.]

How Covid-19 has magnified some of social care’s key problems.
The King’s Fund; 2020.
[The Covid-19 pandemic has shone an uncompromising light on the social care sector, its staff and the people of all ages who use its services. As the sector emerges slowly into a new normal, fearful of a second wave while still trying to make sense of the first, it’s time to take stock. Analysis is difficult because of a lack of up-to-date, quantitative data and the ongoing nature of the pandemic.]

Realising digital-first primary care: shaping the future of UK healthcare.
Deloitte Centre for Health Soutions; 2020.

This report focuses on digitalisation of primary care and discusses the current state, challenges and potential of digital transformation in general practice. It highlights the key steps needed to improve the adoption of technology by patients, practitioners and the wider healthcare system. The overriding message is clear: if primary care is to survive and thrive, it has to make the most of technology.
